Art & Antiques Dealers Make Buxton a Cultural Capital

12th - 15th May 2016

The Buxton Pavilion Gardens, St John's Road, Buxton, Derbyshire SK17 6BE

Art and antiques specialists from across the UK will be returning to the Peak District to offer a superb selection of rare and high quality pieces at The Annual Buxton Antiques Fair at the Pavilion Gardens, 12th - 15th May 2016.

This year the fair will take place in a solid, purpose-built structure alongside the famous Pavilion Gardens building which is currently undergoing restoration. 'Visitors will find all our regular exhibitors back as usual and everyone bringing fresh stock,' explains organiser Sue Ede. 'The restaurant at the Pavilion is open as usual for lunches and refreshments, so visitors can enjoy their visit as much as ever.'

The Buxton Antiques Fair features more than forty leading specialists from across the UK and is widely recognised as one of the most important antiques fairs in the calendar of the UK art market. The fair is always a major event for collectors in the Midlands and North of England.

With traditional 18th and 19th century furniture being joined by 20th century and decorative pieces alongside early folk art, paintings, jewellery, silver, pottery, porcelain and so much more, it's a fair that offers plenty for collectors and interior decorators.

Among the many highlights will be a collection of rare and unusual perfume bottles belong to dealer Richard Hoppé. These include French perfume bottle holder in the form of a lamp post, circa 1930's, by Corday, Paris, with an ash tray to the base and three perfume bottles, from a time when ladies would smoke as they dressed. Other items include stylish Art Deco glass bottles and a collection of Art Nouveau wall tiles.

Among the exhibitors, Mark Buckley Antiques returns with late Victorian and Edwardian walnut and mahogany furniture while Mike Melody Antiques offers farmhouse pieces including sturdy kitchen tables, sets of ladder-back chairs, dressers, cupboards, coffer and occasional items. From Buxton, Steve Bentley Decorative Arts offers designer Arts & Crafts Derbyshire furniture, lighting, silver and copper from the late 19th and early 20th century. Bakewell dealer Peter Bunting Antiques has an esoteric range of 16th 17th and 18th century furniture, paintings and metalwork.

Among the fine art specialists will be E. Stacey-Marks and Baron Fine Art, specialising in 19th and 20th century British and European paintings and sculpture. Jo Bennett Fine Paintings returns with a selection of 20th century English and Continental works by artists including the celebrated Geoffrey Key while Art of the Imagination show a collection of 20th century and contemporary illustrations.

Jewellery is always popular. Fine quality Victorian and Twentieth century pieces will be on display from Trivette, Anderson Jones and T. Robert. Shapiro & Co. from London show Faberge and other Eastern European and Russian silver, glass and enamels. Tony Horsley welcomes collectors of Royal Worcester, Derby, Minton and Coalport and offers a large selection of candle-snuffers. Candice Horley of Twentieth Century Glamour shows a selection of early 20th century porcelain figures, Art Deco art and Hollywood style costume jewellery.

In other areas, Roger de Ville specialises in early English pottery and promises a fine display of Toby jugs, early Staffordshire figures, transferware and commemorative pieces. Richard Hoppe has 19th and 20th century English and Continental glass, including perfume bottles.

The fair is supported by the famous Buxton Opera House and the annual Buxton Festival.
